Talking Points

The bottom line

- The Family Readiness System ensures that regardless of branch of service, active or reserve status, or geographic location, service members, their families and survivors can easily tap into a trusted network of support that maximizes both military and civilian resources.

For families

- Family programs are part of your personal network of support.
 - You can rely on family programs; we're here for you.
 - Family programs provide you with information, services and programs for everyday life.

For families

On base, in the community or online, we are here for you.

- Find us on the installation at [insert contact information]. If we don't have what you need, we can refer you to someone who does.
- Find us online at Military OneSource (<http://www.militaryonesource.mil>; 800-342-9647).

This network of support ensures that you will always have access to support, regardless of your geographic location.

For families

- Family programs contribute to the stability and strength of you and your family.
- Family programs are not just for when there's a problem; use them to sharpen your skills for life.
- Seek help early. Find us online or at one of our many locations around the world.

For leaders

- We are stronger together.
- Working together, leaders and service providers can maximize opportunities to regularly share official family readiness information with military families.
- By collaborating, we ensure no service member, family member or survivor is overlooked.

For leaders

- Think of us as advisors.
- Service provider representatives serve as advisors to leaders, providing information and materials to promote awareness of family readiness services and encourage proactive engagement with the Family Readiness System.
